THE TREND IS CLEARLY MULTI-DISCIPLINARY

The trend is clearly multi-disciplinary and that isn't going away. You can use it in the combining of previously separate regulatory frameworks. We needn't debate whether the accountants contributed more to the effectiveness of the researchers did to the predictability of investment outcomes or lawyers to creating tax-efficient entities. What's clear is that no single profession can meet what we achieve today combining the best of each. We call it Investment Design. It's here first at Charterbridge Dawy. Not just because we can. Because everybody should."

*Frank Williams, CEO and Michael Cripps a General Manager
 Co-Founding and Director Charterbridge at Charterbridge Dawy*

Imagine the decisions between the professions disappearing overnight. Imagine universities producing triple graduates in accounting, legal and financial advisory disciplines. Now picture these graduates maturing into multi-disciplinary practitioners, with more choice and different thinking to their single specialty predecessors. So the email or call to your accountant would be the call to your investment analyst, stockbroker and lawyer in one. With enough of each professional perspective to add certainty to the advice. And new multi-dimensional financial innovations replacing the one-conflicting approaches to the same objective. At Charterbridge Dawy it happens, but not the way we described. How we do it takes a lot more than just imagination. Charterbridge Dawy. Your aspirations, our ways of making them happen.
